Frequently asked questions

What is Classroom Mode?

Classroom Mode is an option designed to address the challenges of remote and hybrid education. It allows you to conduct effective online lessons in conditions that are conducive to keeping students focused. The class instructor has an overview of all the participants in the meeting, from which they can quickly and easily invite a selected person for a 1-on-1 session to help individualize the person's teaching.

What is a 1-on-1 session used for?

1-on-1 mode allows you to quickly create a private conversation with a selected meeting participant. During a 1-on-1 session, it is possible to view files and activate some features that will only be visible to the chosen invitee. This option is great for 1-on-1 consultations during remote classes, oral exams, or providing support for individual work in the remote education model.

Can I record a meeting taking place in Classroom mode?

Of course, recording in this mode is the same as in other events conducted through the LiveWebinar platform.

Can I record a 1-on-1 session?

No, the 1-on-1 session will not be visible on the recording of the meeting. Only the perspective of the person who is not participating in the 1-on-1 session will be visible on the recording.

Can I talk in a 1-on-1 session with more than one person?

No, you can only invite one person to a 1-on-1 session.

Can only a single 1-on-1 session run concurrently during a meeting?

No, the host and all presenters can each hold a single 1-on-1 session at the same time. The number of such sessions is therefore limited by the number of people with host or presenter privileges.

Are 1-on-1 sessions only available in Classroom mode?

No, the ability to run 1-on-1 sessions is available for all Audio and Video modes.

What are the available audio modes?

There are four audio modes to choose from, each of which lets your attendees interact with an event in different ways. Below are the available audio modes.

Discussion: All participants can talk. For larger sessions, up to 25 participants can speak at once while others listen.

When can I use this option? This mode is best for meetings or lessons during which you want your attendees to interact with one another. For example, while planning your next marketing campaign or discussing an assignment with students.

Presentation: Only presenters can speak, and participants must listen.

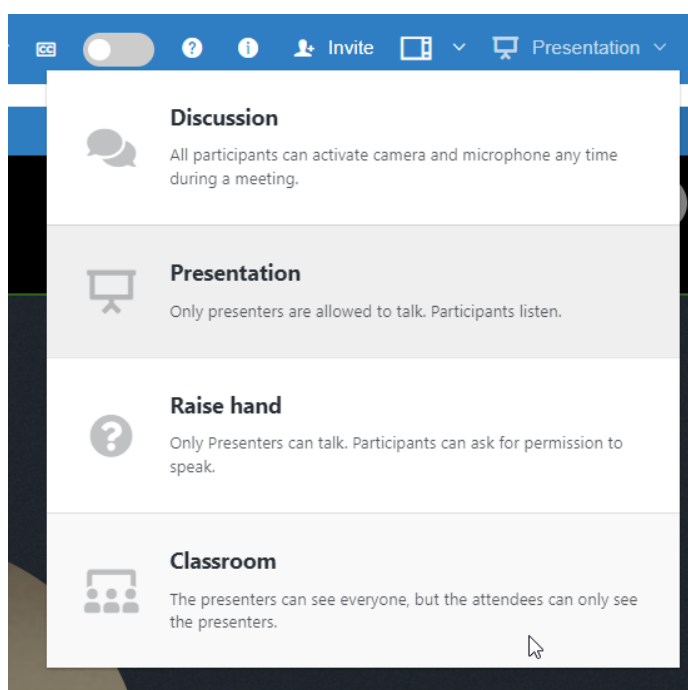

When can I use this option? This mode is great for moments when you need to hold a presentation during a webinar or give a lecture during class, as only the host and presenters can speak.

Raise hand: Only presenters can speak, but participants can request permission to do so by asking for their audio or video to be turned on. The host or presenter can turn on, mute, or stop the audio stream of each participant.

When can I use this option? This mode is useful after giving a presentation during an event, and you'd like to have some time to interact with attendees in a controlled way.

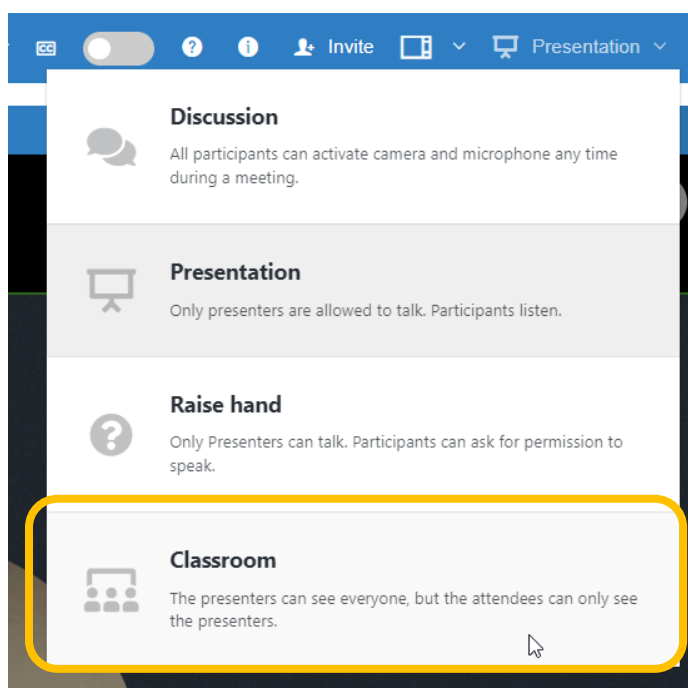

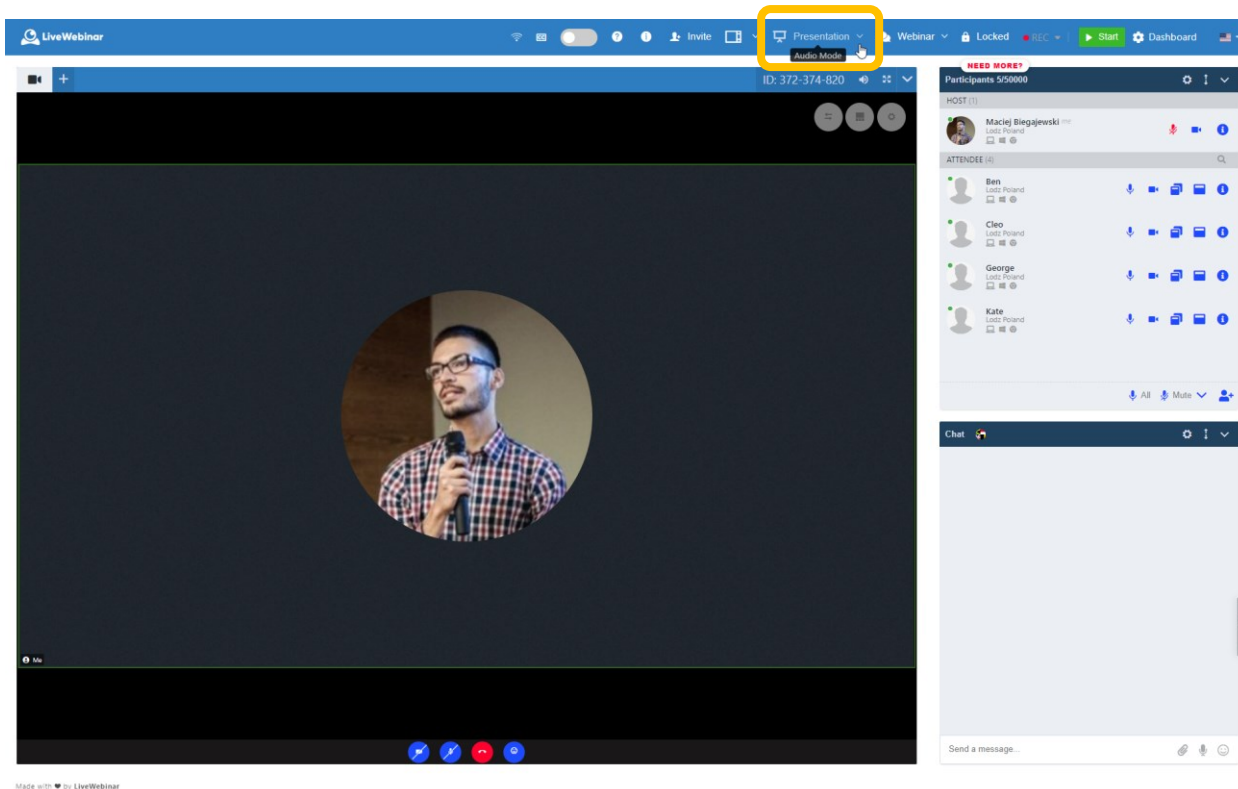

Classroom: Presenters can see all of the participants, but the participants can only see the presenters and not one another.

When can I use this option? This mode works best when you'd like to hold a lesson without the possibility of participants distracting one another, for example during a lecture, test, or exam.
